Think you MUST accept Microsoft's offer. Suggest you research the history of computers in education (a field I worked in for years) - that research will show that Apple got special government privileges and perks for donating Apples to Schools around the country in the early 1980's. That is why the education system is behind the rest of the computer world in system implementation and design.

Suggest you give the school professionals a chance to "catch-up" with M/S's offer to assist US Schools.

And that should end the entire matter.
